

Steve Jamison

1977 - Football,
Hockey

Steve Jamieson may have been one of the finest athletes Stoneham High has ever produced, and despite a series of nagging injuries was able to become an iconic name in SHS sports annals.

As a sophomore, Jamieson started as a receiver and filled in at quarterback when senior QB John Censullo got injured. In hockey, he was named a Middlesex League All Star and was an Honorable Mention by the Boston Globe as an All Scholastic. In his junior year, he dominated the gridiron running and passing for touchdowns as well as kicking extra points, resulting in him being the highest-scoring QB in Eastern Mass.

Jamieson was the co-winner, along with fellow Hall of Famer **Paul White**, of The Marty Jordan Award for his performance against Reading on Thanksgiving Day; but as a junior was not eligible to be selected as a Middlesex League All Star as only seniors were selected.

In hockey, he was second on the team in scoring which was good enough to once again be selected a Middlesex League All Star. A shoulder operation delayed his baseball season debut, but he was still able to achieve a varsity letter and finished with a .545 batting average. A separated shoulder forced Jamieson to miss the first two games of football his senior year which mandated a switch from quarterback to halfback. After losing two games without Jamieson, the team turned their fortunes around with his return reeling off a series of victories. Game after game Steve provided the team with key touchdown runs. Scoring both touchdowns in a 12-8 win over Reading, Jamieson was once again co-winner of the Marty Jordan Award. Finishing sixth in Division I in scoring with 66 points, he was named a Middlesex League All Star and team MVP.

In hockey, he led the Spartans in scoring with 16 goals and 14 assists for 30 points to be named team MVP and a Middlesex League All Star, but was unable to participate in the All Star game due to a separated shoulder. His shoulder injury prevented him from playing baseball his senior year.

Steve currently resides in Gloucester with his wife Chrissy where he runs a successful window cleaning company. They have five children.
